From Saturday, OCTOBER 19, to Saturday, OCTOBER 26. 1734.

Frankfort, June 6.

PRince Eugene of Savoy, who commands both the Emperor's Army and that alſo of the Empire, has ſent Circular Letters to the ſeveral Princes, ſtrongly importuning them to haſten the March of their reſpective Contingents, but 'tis believ'd that they will not have all join'd him before the latter end of next Month, or the begining of Auguſt. A Corps of Saxon Troops, which King Auguſtus at firſt deſign'd for Poland, has been order'd to repair to the Imperial Camp. They amount to near 3000 Men, and conſiſt of Prince Xavier's Regiment of Foot, another Regiment of Foot which the Duke of Saxe Weiſſenfells has lately rais'd, and a Body of Foreſters which his Majeſty has newly form'd, to the Number of 1500 Men, ſtout Fellows that value neither Fatigue nor Danger. The Peaſants of the Foreſt of Odenwald have join'd the Prince of Hovenhellern, in order to take part in his Expedition to Alſace; but 'tis tho't the ſame will hardly ſucceed, ſeeing the Militia of that Country are excellently well diſcipln'd, and are no way inferior to Regular Troops either in Courage or Order.

Heidelberg, June 2. The City of Frankfort having return'd no Anſwer to the firſt Summons which the Intendant of the French Army ſent the Magiſtracy, in relation to their Contribution, a ſecond has been diſpatch'd thither and runs thus,

"PAUL ESPRIT FEYDEAU, Knight,
"Lord of BROU.

"The Magiſtrates, Bailiffs, Officers, &c. of the City "of Frankfort, are hereby required to ſend immediately "to the Head Quarters of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's "Army, one or more Deputies, with full Powers to treat "concerning the Contribution due to his Majeſty on Ac"count of the War, and herein let them fail not, under "Pain of Military Compulſion, according to the utmoſt "Rigour. In caſe of Compliance, theſe Preſents will "ſerve as ſufficient Paſsports, for the ſaid Deputy or De"puties, their Servants, and Baggage.

"Given at the Camp at Graben, the 18th of May, 1734

"FEYDEAU,

"By his Lordſhip's Command,

"GOURY."

Stolpen in Pomerania, June 26. The Capitulation which M. de la Motte Peirouſe, Brigadier of the moſt Chriſtian King's Armies, ſign'd with Count Munich, her Czarian Majeſty's General before Dantzick, was certainly much more in Favour of the French Troops than they could have Reaſon to expect; but the Count was reſolved to let them ſee to what a Degree of Politeneſs the Ruſſians were arriv'd. Inſtances of an extreme Civility they had ſeen in his Readineſs to ſend them their Dead, and in the Tenderneſs with which he treated his Priſoners; but his Galantry, from the time the Capitulation was concluded, exceeded their Imagination; He deſir'd a Viſit from M. de la Motte, which he repaid, and afterwards entertain'd him twice at Dinner: He told him at parting, "that the Muſcovites had their Reputation too much at "Heart to ſuffer the French to go away with an ill Opi"nion of them;" He likewiſe gave him to underſtand, "that altho' the Maſſacre of the Ruſſian Sailors, be"longing to the Ships taken by the French Squadron, "call'd out for ſevere Reprizals, yet he ſhould paſs it "over as a thing that had never happen'd, or that "ought not to be credited;" He conſented directly to M. de la Motte's Requeſt, of having the Officer deliver'd up to him, who belonging to the French Troops, during their late Attack of the Ruſſian Trenches, found Means to make his eſcape over to the latter. His Caſe was thus, He commanded the ſecond Column at the ſaid Attack, and being no Frenchmen by Birth, poſſibly wanted the Fire, very probably too the Zeal, that ſpur'd the Count de Plelo ſo faſt towards the Enemy; with this the unfortunate Count reproach'd him, in Terms that his Excellency thought due to a Man leſs animated than himſelf, but ſuch as the Officer could not take, who accordingly drew out a Piſtol and ſhot him dead on the Spot. The Ruſſians were too ſcrupulous to determine Points of Honour, but deteſting the Murder, no one had ſpoke to him ſince his taking Refuge with them.

Boſton, auguſt 19. The beginning of laſt Week, a young Gentlewomen of this Town, going on Foot to Viſit a Friend at Dedham, was overtaken a few Miles from the Place by a Negroe Man on Horſeback, belonging to a Gentleman in Town, who was ſent there to look after a Farm; and the young Woman being pretty well tired with walking, asked the Negro who 'tis ſaid had a Pillon behind him, to let her ride a little Way to eaſe herſelf, who readily granted her Requeſt; but he had not carried her very far before he rode into the Woods, and alighting, pulled out his Knife, and told her if ſhe would not let him lie with her he would cut her Throat, which put her into a terrible Fright, and notwithſtanding ſhe made all the Reſiſtance ſhe could yet he overpowered her and had his Will of her, after which he ſwore that if ever ſhe diſcovered it he would cut her Throat: However, the firſt Houſe they came to ſhe told the People what had happened, upon which the Villain made off, and has not been ſeen ſince; but 'tis hoped it will not be long before he is taken and brought to Juſtice.

The Brigantine Succeſs, Henry Stocks Maſter, being about the Lat. of 39. met with a violent Storm a meer Huricane of Wind about South, which laſted about 14 Hours, it rack'd his Veſſel almoſt to Pieces, and tore his Sails and Rigging, the Veſſel was ſo terrible leaky they had much ado to keep her above Water, and he was obliged to put back here again, the 12th Inſtant, with the Veſſel in a terrible condition.

From the Craftſman, July 20.

Hague, June 30. Mr. Horatio Walpole's Return to this Place, where he arrived laſt Tueſday, has given Birth to various Conjectures, according to the Inclinations of thoſe, who reaſon upon the Cauſe of that Event.

Some, who ſeem to judge well of the Nature of Things, and theſe are far the greater Number, will have it, that he is the Meſſenger of Peace, and brings the Olive Branch; that he and the grand Penſionary will reſtore Peace upon the Earth, and drive the cruel Bellona to the loweſt Pit of Hell. Nay, there are ſome of this Claſs of Conjecturers, who already give us a Plan of the Pacification, not conſidering that the Emperor is no longer ger Maſter, or capable of doing any Thing in Poland; that the Court of Peterſburg will never ſuffer King Staniſlaus to reign there; and that France will never forgive their proſcribing the King's Father-in-Law, and laying his Embaſſador in Irons.

Others, who are not altogether ſo haſty, preſume that Mr. Walpole is come hither to deliberate with the grand Penſionary, and to concert with him a Plan that will be acceptable to all the Parties engaged in War.

Hic labor, hoc Opus!

This would be the real Effect of an Imagination that might claim the firſt Rank in the paſt and future Ages; to reconcile, for Inſtance, the Emperor in his preſent State of Mortification, with the King of Spain in his Triumphs; or the fugitive Staniſlaus with the Czarina, upon whom every Thing ſmiles; or to perſuade the D. of Savoy to reſtore the Milaneze to the Emperor, who has not a Foot of Land in it. In a Word, to make the Houſe of Auſtria truckle to That of Burbon for one unfortunate Campain. This is what thoſe Politicians can never come into, who have ſeen and conſidered what paſs'd in Europe during the Reigns of Leopold and Lewis XIV. Reigns fertile in Events, which might ſerve as a Rule to the moſt profound Politician.

The third Claſs of Conjecturers imagine that Mr. Walpole is come hither, not ſo much to labour for Peace, as to concert with the Republick, proper Meaſures for War againſt next Spring. They take Time by the Foretop, ſay theſe, that his Majeſty the King of Great-Britain may give a good Account thereof to his new Parliament; for as, on the one Hand, there is not the leaſt Appearance of reconciling Spirits, and uniting Intereſts, which the Advantages of this Campaign have placed at ſo frightful a Diſtance; ſo on the other Hand, they cannot perſuade themſelves that it is the Intereſt of Great-Britain or this Republick, to ſuffer the Emperor to be cruſh'd, who is abandon'd by the Germanick Body, after they had ſo pompouſly declared War againſt France; for where are the Troops they ſhould have ſent to the unfortunate Prince Eugene? If they ſent any, what Troops were they? Where is the Money they ſhould have ſent to the military Cheſt? Thus has the Dyet done the Emperor more Hurt than Good, by declaring War againſt France, and not making it.

LONDON July 20.

On Sunday morning arrived a Courrier from Paris, with advice that the French Troops before Philipsburgh, having erected Batteries upon the Crownwork, which they had carried the 14th Inſtant N S. began to cannonade the Body of the Place. On the 16th they made a Breach in the Salliant Angle of the Baſtion, as likewiſe in the Curtain, and having, in fine, gain'd a Lodgment there, Count Wuttgenauw deſired to capitulate, which has been ſince granted accordingly; Two Deſerters from the Town gave the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt Information that the Garriſon was in great Want of Proviſions, and that they muſt be obliged to ſurrender upon the Generals Attempting to ſtorm the Town; Meaſures being taken for that Purpoſe the Governor beat the Chamade accordingly.

Letters from Paris confirm the Capitulation of Philipſburg, and mention that Count Wuttgenaw, the Governor, obtain'd the Liberty of marching out with the uſual Honours of War; but was obliged to repair with his Garriſon to Mentz, whither the French conducted them under a ſtrong Guard, the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt utterly refuſing to liſten to any Overtures of their being permitted to join Prince Eugene.

Private Letters from the Imperial Camp on the Rhine take Notice of a remarkable Intercourſe of Civility which paſs'd lately between His Highneſs Prince Eugene and the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt the French General. The Rhine it ſeems having been thick and muddy from the exceſſive Floods, and the Imperialiſts being in Poſſeſſion of the ſole Springs that are there abouts, the Marſhal ſent a Country Boy to their Camp to deſire a Pitcher of Spring Water. The Boy had not paſs'd the firſt Guard before he was ſeiz'd on Suſpicion of being a Spy; but making loud Aſſertions of his Innocence, the Noiſe of the Accident reach'd Prince Eugene, who cauſed the Boy, to be brought immediately before him, and being ſoon convinced of his Simplicity, ſent him back with a double Supply of what he wanted, under Safe Guard to the very Lines of the Enemy. The Marſhal D'Aſfeldt was ſtruck with Prince Eugene's Politeneſs, and immediately ſent his Highneſs two Mules laden with Burgundy, who accepted the ſame, and returned the Mules to the Marſhal with a Preſent of Tockay.

On Sunday laſt his Majeſty received the Imperialiſts Account of the late Battle of Parma, containing, as we are inform'd, Six Sheets of Paper.

CHARLESTOWN Oct. 26.

Wm. Yeomans in the Gazette Septemb. 28. ſeems to glory in a Victory over me by my Confeſſion of having received 10 l. from Mr. Cooke for the uſe of Tho: Holmes, and alſo charges me with groſs contradictions. The impartial Reader may ſee in my foregoing Advertiſement I own'd the Receipt of the ſaid 10 l. Whether I paid or not paid the ſame to the ſaid Holmes, it is quite out of the caſe And if Wm. Yeomans can compel me to pay him the ſaid 10 l. then (by a parity of reaſon) all perſons who have paid any ſum or ſums of money to the ſaid Holmes are obliged to pay the ſame over again to the ſaid Yeomans, notwithſtanding the ſaid Holmes's Receipts, altho' he traffick'd by his the ſaid Yeomans's aſſent. 'Tis ſtrange the ſaid Yeomans (who is or pretends to be a knowing Merchant or Factor) ſhould ſtop my letters directed for Oliver Marton of Warwick Court Eſq; and Tho: Ruſſell of Jooke Court Chancery Lane Eſq; London, in anſwer to ſome Letters of great moment from them ſent to me by Capt. Compton and others lately. Robert Shaw.

ROBERT WRIGHT Chief Juſtice.

South Carolina ſſ.

BEfore the Hon. Robert Wright Eſq; Chief Juſtice of the Province aforeſaid perſonally appeared before me Rob. Shaw of Charleſtown Gent. and made oath that on or about the beginning of September laſt Capt. Daviſon told him this Depoſent in the hearing of Mr. James Fowler, that he had orders laid on him not to carry any Letters or prove any Inſtrument of writing for the uſe of him the ſaid Shaw to any perſon in London, and at the ſame time expreſſed his concern that he could not comply with his former promiſe made to him the ſaid Shaw in the preſence of Capt. Compton at the ſaid Fowler's, and the ſame morning that he this Depoſent was to meet the ſaid Daviſon by his own appointment, in his Depoſents way there he ſaw the ſaid Daviſon at the ſaid Yeomans's Door, and told him the ſaid Daviſon that he the ſaid Shaw was ready to execute the ſaid Inſtrument in his and his Mate's preſence, the ſaid Yeomans being within hearing in the paſſage of his houſe, called away the ſaid Daviſon from him the ſaid Shaw in a paſſionate tone, and at the ſame time gave out againſt this Depoſent opprobrious language, and requeſted that the ſaid Daviſon ſhould not carry any letters or Atteſt, or prove any Inſtrument as aforeſaid, which he this Depoſent can prove by a credible Evidence, whoſe name he this Depoſent is unwilling to publiſh till compelled by further Proceedings: And further ſaith that the ſaid Yeomans ordered the ſaid Daviſon not to carry any Letters or Atteſt any Powers of Attorney for him this Depoſent, if he the ſaid Daviſon had any value for him the ſaid Yeomans. Robert Shaw.

Jurat coram me, Oct. 17. 1734.

ROBERT WRIGHT.

Whereas Mr. Rob Shaw in the *Gazette Numb. 38. October 19, 1734. made an Affidavit before the Chief Juſtice of this Province, by which it ſeems that the ſaid Shaw ſignifies, that Mr Wm Yeomans's Name was mentioned by Capt. Laviſon in my hearing: This is to ſatisfie the Reader, that I never heard the ſaid Yeomans's Name mentioned in any ſuch Affair whatſoever.

Oct. 25 1734. JAMES FOWLER.

Paragraph of a Letter from Capt. Richard Daviſon, to Mr. Wm. Yeomans, Merchant in Charleſtown.

George Town Winyaw.

" I ſuppoſe Mr. Shaw thought I was gone,
" or he could not have had the Impudence to
" put in ſuch an Advertiſement.

NB. At laſt Seſſions on Motion of Mr. Attorney General Mr. Shaw was bound in a Recognizance, to appear at the next Seſſions, to anſwer ſuch Charge as ſhould then be exhibited againſt him on behalf of the Crown, the Attorney General having declared in Court, that the Words publiſhed by him (in Gazette Numb. 36.) relating to the ſtopping of his Letters by Mr. Yeomans, expreſly amounted to a Libel in Law.

Any perſon white Man or Negro that will bring any Fox or Racoon Skins to William Glen Hatter in Broad-ſtreet, next to the houſe Mr. Ramſey liv'd in, ſhall have 2 s. 6 d. for every Skin paid to him by the ſaid Wm. Glen, who makes and ſells fine Beaver and other Hats very reaſonably.
